JKDDC Conduits to Professional Military Education- A Conceptual Framework

Jerry West, D.Sc.
JKDDC LNO

USJFCOM JWFC
Presented to DLCC Working Group
22 March 2007

Opportunities and Challenges

- JKDDC Portal Development
  - Provide Single Sign On (SSO) and subsequent establishment of a federated search.
  - Use Defense Knowledge Online (DKO) for accelerated and efficient delivery of online courses
  - Lead Joint community in adoption of federated search of knowledge portals
  - Promote development of Joint Learning Continuum and Joint Qualifications Management Initiatives

- JKDDC Conduit Options to J/PME Schools
  - Linkages to a federation of J/PME community of interest (COI) portals
  - Bilateral hosting of JPME/ JKDDC Courses (Policy implications)
  - Bridges across online Joint education and training divides

Background: Joint Learning Continuum

- Four interdependent pillars with assessment
  - Joint Individual Training…learning to do
    - Joint Learning Portal (JLP); "virtual schoolhouse"
  - Joint Professional Military Education…learning to think
    - Competency-based…Petri dish for culture change
  - Self-development…self-directed learning
    - Self-motivated quest of knowledge
    - Increased Commanding Officer role
  - Joint Experience…practical application of what was learned
    - Joint experience accrues where jointness is applied
    - Joint exercises (JXP)
- Multiple paths of delivery and/or attainment
  - J/PME Schools/ Portals
  - JKDDC Portal (Internet, NIPR, SIPRNET)

WELCOME! The mission of the Joint Forces Staff College, a component of the National Defense University, is to educate national security leaders in joint, multinational, and interagency operational-level planning and warfighting, to instill a primary commitment to joint, multinational, and interagency teamwork, attitudes, and perspectives. Military operations increasingly require the Armed Services to work jointly and JFSC provides students the tools to operate in a joint environment. JFSC is composed of four schools, each with different student populations and purposes.

Way Ahead

April 2007

- Identify Business / Mission requirements
- Identify Required Data and Capabilities
- Identify Authoritative Data Sources or Capabilities and OPR for each

September 2007

Plan and Implement

- Business Operations - Negotiate Usage and Access
  - Meet with OPR to discuss business requirements for sharing / usage of needed data and capabilities
  - Develop MOU defining requirements and relationship
  - Define business requirements (e.g., account mgmt, security, Info Assurance)
  - (w/ Business Ops) Define level of effort, schedule, and required resources for development, implementation, and maintenance
  - Secure required resources and funding

Way Ahead Cont'd

- Technical
  - Identify technical requirements for sharing / usage of data and capability
  - Assess technical feasibility based on current technology and systems
  - (w/ Business Ops) Define level of effort and technical resources required for implementation, and maintenance
  - Architect and Design technical solution
  - (Prototype > Beta > IOC)

The Distance Education Program (DEP) at the US Army War College allows you to participate in a two-year, rigorous program of instruction that results in the award of the same Graduation Certificate and the same fully-accredited Masters of Science degree awarded to graduates of our resident program. At last, you can receive at any duty station or remote location, the same high-quality instruction delivered here at Carlisle Barracks. The Distance Education Program allows you to work a regular full-time job and still make time for a War College degree. You will need to devote 15 hours each week to a program that is delivered to you via the Internet, one that leverages technology to enhance the educational experience.
The DEP is designed to be provocative, demanding, and rigorous; here, there are at least two sides to every issue and often, there are no school solutions. Is this program for you? Do you want to know more? Click on one of the buttons above to learn more about this unique academic program!
This is a challenging program; you will be in a class of highly intelligent professionals who seek to hone their intellectual skills and professional competency. You will be challenged academically, but there are teams of trained professionals to assist you as you wrestle with many of the complex issues of today's global situation. Your view of many issues may change as you work through the program. In the pages that follow, you will be given a brief overview of the program and many of the issues that are a part of our program of instruction.

Marine Corps War College
Mission
The mission of the Marine Corps War College is to educate selected senior officers and civilians for decision-making across the range of military operations in a joint, interagency, and multinational environment. Marine Corps War College graduates are prepared to assume senior leadership positions of increasing complexity through the study of national military strategy, theater strategy and plans, and military support to those strategies within the context of national security policies, decision-making, objectives, and resources.
Master's Degree
Marine Corps War College graduates receive a Master of Strategic Studies (MSS) degree.
Marine Corps University is accredited by the Commission on Colleges of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools to award Master's Degrees.

Command and Staff College

Mission

Informed by the study of history, language and culture, CSC educates and trains its joint, multinational, and interagency professionals in order to produce skilled warfighting leaders able to overcome diverse 21st Century security challenges.

Degree

Command and Staff College offers students the option of completing the requirements for a Master of Military Studies (MMS) degree.

The Commission on Colleges of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools accredits Marine Corps University to award Master's Degrees.

Master of Military Studies

There are two ways a resident College student may seek graduate credit hours for the academic year. One is to be accepted into, and complete the work for, the Master of Military Studies Program, initiated in academic year 1993-94. The President of Marine Corps University grants this degree.

A second possibility for graduate credit is transferring Command and Staff College "hours" to a graduate program at another college or university. In the past, institutions have accepted a limited number of credit hours towards a master's degree. The number of transferable hours varies according to (1) the graduate program itself, and (2) the determination of the receiving College or University.

Over 1,000 students have subsequently elected to seek the Master of Military Studies degree since initiation of the program, for which there are several requirements beyond the core curriculum. The Master of Military Studies is a voluntary program;

OVERVIEW
The College of Naval Warfare is a multidisciplinary program designed for U.S. Naval and Coast Guard officers in the grades of captain or commander, U.S. Marine Corps, Army and Air Force officers in the grades of colonel or lieutenant colonel and civilians of equivalent seniority from various Federal agencies. This senior level professional military education program provides students with executive-level preparation for higher responsibilities as senior captains/colonels and flag/general officers.
Selection
Military students are selected to attend the College of Naval Warfare by their respective services. All officers who attend the College of Naval War will have bachelor's degree--historically, on average, more than half will already have been awarded master's degrees and three percent will hold doctorates, will have compiled outstanding performance records during their 15 to 20-year service careers to date, and will be considered to possess the potential for future achievement and promotion within their respective services and the joint arena. While each service has its own selection process, in the case of the U.S. Navy, each annual board convened to select officers for promotion to commander then proceeds to choose candidates for the College of Naval Warfare from among those commander-selectees; all captain selectees are considered eligible to attend a senior service college. Attendance by civilian officials is by invitation to their Federal agencies, who in turn nominate their respective candidates using similar selection criteria.
Class Profile
While the size of each College of Naval Warfare class varies slightly due to a number of factors, a typical class will be comprised of 200-225 students. Although the majority of U.S. Naval officers and officers from the other U.S. services and civilians in the class will begin their studies in August, nearly one-half of the Navy students and several of their classmates matriculate at the beginning of either the winter or spring trimesters of a given academic year.
Curriculum
College of Naval Warfare students pursue studies in each of the Naval War College's three core subject areas in the following order of presentation: National Security Decision Making, Policy and Strategy, and joint Military Operations. During the first two of these trimesters, College of Naval Warfare students will be joined in lectures and in seminars by international students of the Naval Command College. Each College of Naval Warfare student is also required to enroll in one Elective Program course of his or her choice per trimester. A limited number of students in each class may, with selection committee approval, forego up to one trimester of the core curriculum to participate in the Center for Naval Warfare Studies' Advanced Research Program.

OVERVIEW
The College of Naval Command and Staff is a multidisciplinary program designed for U.S. Naval and Coast Guard officers in the grade of lieutenant commander, U.S. Marine Corps, Army, and Air Force officers in the grade of major, and civilians of equivalent seniority from various Federal agencies. This intermediate level service college course provides an initial opportunity for professional military education wherein students prepare for increased responsibilities as commanders/lieutenant colonels and as junior captains/colonels.
Selection
Military students are selected to attend the College of Naval Command and Staff by their respective services. In general, all officers who attend the College of Naval Command and Staff will have bachelor's degrees--historically, on average, almost half will already have been awarded master's degrees, will have compiled outstanding performance records during their 12 to 15-year service careers to date, and will be considered to possess the potential for future achievement and promotion within their respective services and in the joint arena.
